Climate Review for the month of August 2014

Presented by:

National Weather Service
Newport/Morehead City

Summary

During August, the upper level trough continued to persist over the eastern half of the country and lead to cooler and wetter conditions across the area. Towards the end of the month, surface high pressure and a ridge aloft dominated the Southeast. Overall, average temperatures were slighter cooler than normal with average max temperatures in the mid to upper 80s and average lows were in the upper 60s to low 70s. Several stationary fronts continued to stall across the area producing an increase of showers and thunderstorm along with your typical diurnal convection. This resulted in above normal rainfall amounts across our area, particularly along the coast. Several locations along the coast have seen rainfall totals 10 to 15 inches and isolated locations up to 17 inches.
