
Historic South Swell expected this weekend.

1 message

WFO Honolulu Operations - NOAA Service Account <w-hfo.operations@noaa.gov>
Bcc: john.bravender@noaa.gov

Fri, Jul 15, 2022 at 12:20 PM

National Weather Service -
Honolulu*Issued: 12:15 PM 7/15*Point of Contact: NWS Honolulu (808) 973-5280

KEY POINTS

- Historic South Swell is anticipated for this weekend. Surf will build all day Saturday and peak at High Surf Warning levels Saturday night through Sunday night.
- Large wave run up and coastal impacts are expected, especially during the late afternoon high tides.
- As the event nears, take a look at our state wide surf forecast for the latest surf height forecasts.
<https://www.weather.gov/hfo/SRF>
- Advisory level surf is also expected for east facing shores of the Big Island on Saturday due to swell from Tropical Cyclone Darby.

CONFIDENCE AND DETAILSSouth facing shores of all Hawaiian Islands

	Surf height:
Confidence level:	12 to 16 feet with occasional sets to 20 feet
High	Saturday night through Sunday night.
	Swell direction: South (170 to 190 degrees)

DetailsOnset: Forerunners arriving tonight, building all day Saturday*Peak: Saturday night through Sunday night*Duration of event: Surf rising to Advisory levels Saturday. High Surf Warning levels Saturday night through Sunday night. High Surf*Advisory expected Monday through Tuesday.

https://www.weather.gov/hfo/gfe_graphics

--

Visit us on the web/social media:WFO Honolulu: <https://www.weather.gov/hfo>CPHC: <https://www.weather.gov/cphc>Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/NWSHonolulu/>Twitter: <https://twitter.com/NWSHonolulu>