

Accumulating Snow Tonight

February 2, 2025
1:33 PM

Winter Weather Advisory In Effect for Interior Southern CT Tonight

Key Messages

- Accumulating snow is expected tonight, mainly across the interior.
- A winter weather advisory is in effect across interior southern Connecticut tonight.

HAZARDS & IMPACTS

Interior Southern Connecticut

- 2 to 4 inches of snow will result in snow covered roads and slippery travel tonight.
- Peak snowfall rates may reach ½” to 1” per hour.
- The snow occurs from 7 pm this evening until 1 am, tapering off from west to east through 3 am with potential for lingering freezing drizzle.

Lower Hudson Valley, Interior NE NJ, and Coastal Southern Connecticut and Southern Westchester

- 1 to 2 inches of snow, locally up to 3 inches will result in snow covered roads and slippery travel tonight.
- Peak snowfall rates may reach ½” to 1” per hour.
- The snow occurs from 6 pm this evening until midnight, tapering off from west to east through 1 am with potential for lingering freezing drizzle.

New York City Metro and Long Island

- Precip may begin as light snow this evening, but quickly transition to plain rain. A few tenths to a half inch of snow accumulation possible away from the immediate coast before the change to rain.

NWS ALERTS

- Winter Weather Advisory : Northern Fairfield, Northern New Haven, Northern Middlesex, and Northern New London Counties 6pm this evening until 7am Monday Morning

NEXT BRIEF

This will be the only briefing for this event.